

spring showers bring...

On a warm March Sunday, friends and family of our editor, Corey Williams, gathered at the Governor's Club in Chapel Hill, to celebrate the expected arrival of Walker Grace Williams. Corey's close friend, Christie Cook, took great care with the decor, keeping in mind the guest of honor's profession. "It's a daunting task to plan an event for an event planner. All the details had to be just right," said Christie.

Christie chose a pink and green color scheme and selected taffeta linens, silver chargers and white chair covers as the backdrop for scores of handmade and personalized details. For the invitations, she hand-cut tiny onesies from green gingham fabric and fastened them to vellum with miniature clothespins. She carved tiny slits in baby blocks to create the perfect menu card holder. She filled tiny baby bottles with jellybeans and personalized them with each guest's name to create a sweet place card. She fashioned fresh centerpieces from pink roses and glass vases filled with limes. Green and pink glitter polka dots decorated the menu card. The result? A picture-perfect table with lots of pretty detail.
